Rainforests are found in hot countries around the Equator. They get their name from the amount it rains, which is almost every day in most rainforests!

Some species of elephant live within rainforests. They are big creatures and need a lot of food to keep themselves going. They can eat up to 136 kilograms of food in one day; this is about the same as 136 bags of sugar in weight.

Vines are a type of plant that grows in the rainforest. They can reach a length of 200m, which is nearly as long as two football pitches!

Toucans are at home in the rainforest tree canopy. They have long beaks that measure about 19cm in length - about the same size as a banana!

The stripes of the tiger enable it to hide easily within the environment of the rainforest. This is perfect for hunting, as the tiger can get close to its prey without being seen.
